FRANK LIESS FORMER MOKENA BANKER REPORTS OIL HAS BEEN FOUND ON HIS MONTANA RANCH

Producing oil well expected within next 90 days.
Drilling is well under way now.

Marcus Liess, who is visiting in Mokena with his grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Liess, has just received a letter from his father, Frank Liess of Gage, Mont., stating that the Ohio Oil company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company, is now drilling for oil on some of the holdings of Mally & Liess ranch near Roundup, Mont. He also stated that Montana will be the leading oil state in the Union, now having wells that produce more high grade oil than any other wells in the United States. The Ohio Oil company is drilling in what is called the Big Wall structure, which is partly located on the Mally & Liess ranch. Mr. Liess says they expect a producing oil well within 90 days.

(The editor is informed that the oil boom which created much interest in this community the past summer when oil was reported on the William Schumacher farm in New Lenox township has not died out, as has been supposed, but that the matter of drilling for oil has been deferred until next year as oil drillers are hard to get right now. When the new village well was drilled in Mokena this fall a vein of oil was struck and the oil plainly showed on the water. It is said this was only a small seepage vein, showing that there is oil somewhere in this section.)

REMINDER OF TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. and Mrs. William Kreis were married 20 years last Thursday. A host of their friends and members of their congregation were aware of the fact and surprised them with a postal card shower and with the presentation of a beautiful bronze electric parlor lamp. The lamp has three light bulbs and a most beautiful shade. The worthy pastor and his wife were indeed greatly surprised and are thankful to the donors of the beautiful gift.

FOURTH AND FINAL P. O. RESIGNATION HANDED IN.

Mrs. Sadie F. Grogan, who has served Mokena as postmistress and telephone manager for some time, has found it a rather difficult matter to dispose of these positions. She has tendered her resignation to the Chicago Telephone company many months ago, and has not been relieved of this position as yet. She has tendered her fourth and final resignation as postmistress to the postal department at Washington, but has not been relieved of this position either. It is probable that the Post Office department will call for an examination to fill this vacancy in the near future, as letters have been received from a Washington correspondence school by a number of Mokena people saying that an examination is about to be called for to fill the postal vacancy.

It is to be hoped that someone will take the examination and that the post office will remain here. It will be remembered that when Ona McGovern resigned as postmaster it looked as though Mokena would lose its post office when no one cared to take the examination, which was called for the second time before any applicants were secured.

RESIGNS COOK COUNTY JOB.

Ernest G. Tonn, who has been connected with the Cook County School for Delinquent Boys in Chicago in the capacity of probation officer, has resigned his position, said resignation becoming effective October 31. Mr. and Mrs. Tonn have returned to their home in Mokena.

Surprised by Shower

A crowd of 85 young folks gathered at the Herman Wannemacher home Sunday evening and held a surprise miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Amanda Wannemacher who is about to be the bride of Frank Schult. The evening was spent socially and the guests all enjoyed a fine time. A large number of relatives were present. The bride to be received many beautiful gifts.

The trapping season is open now, opening November 1. It is said that trapping will be heavy this winter. Thus far there has been a good demand for trapping licenses. The trapping season is open to March 15.

TINLEY PARK IS AIDING IN WANT RELIEF ABROAD

Tinley Park, Nov. 5.—Many Tinley Park people are sending packages of provisions and clothing to the needy in Germany. From letters received from Germany times are exceedingly hard. Underwear and other clothes cannot be bought for love or money, as the material is so scarce. The German people are practical and whatever is sent to them in the line of cast-off clothes is converted into useful garments. Flour and salt bags are even in demand and are converted into useful articles. George Schreiber has been attending to the forwarding of gift packages to Germany, and has himself already sent 52 pairs of shoes to the needy in the old Fatherland.

Suffering will undoubtedly be intense among the poorer people this winter due to lack of warm clothing and proper food. Anyone who wishes to send any clothes, foodstuffs, etc., can get full information about transportation of same from Mr. Schreiber.

BALL TEAM DANCE BIG AFFAIR.

The Halloween and confetti dance held at the Saenger hall Saturday night under the auspices of the Bull Frog Baseball team drew an immense crowd. A very good time was enjoyed by all.

The Triangle club of Blue Island will hold their first annual dance at the Saenger hall on November 6.

Four dances are scheduled for the Saenger hall for the month of November.

NEW TELEPHONE MANAGER IN CHARGE.

The local Chicago telephone exchange is under a new manager now. Henry Wilke, who has succeeded John Funk, took charge the first of this month.

Monday was moving day. August Schoenock moved to Blue Island and John C. Funk and family moved into the Schoenock dwelling, while Henry Wilke and family moved into the Funk apartments and Mr. Lux moved into the Wilke place.

Farmers in this section have been retarded in their work of corn husking by the rain.

BAZAAR WELL ATTENDED.

The bazaar and supper which was held at the Saenger hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the Zion Lutheran church last Wednesday was a big success. A program was held in the evening. George Stoeckman sang a solo, Clarence Goessel played a piano solo and the Ladies' Aid sang a number of songs. Mrs. Savage of Seattle, Wash., a sister of Mrs. Fred Schmidt, who is visiting with the latter, sang also. She is an opera singer and has a beautiful voice.

MORE SPUDS IN.

Hick & Messenbrink received a carload of potatoes Monday and by night sold out three-fourths of the car. The demand for spuds has been very heavy.

RECEIVE HARD COAL.

A supply of hard coal was received by the Beatty Lumber company the past week and the supply was soon exhausted by the heavy demand for hard coal.

INSTRUCTING AGENTS.

Fred Goebel has been appointed district agent for the International Life Insurance company, and he is now instructing eight agents who are to work under him. Mr. Goebel has made a wonderful success of the life insurance business.

Health is at the foundation of human happiness. Through its Rural Service, Public Health Nursing Service and Health Center Service, the American Red Cross aims greatly to strengthen this foundation and to draw more closely than ever the neighborly ties that bind the American people together. Mokena Church Drive Ends With Great Success, New Edifice Assured

Mokena, Nov. 5.—The big building fund drive of the St. John's Evangelical church has proved to be a big success. Officially the drive was to have ended Sunday, October 31, but on account of many people making pledges at the last minute it has been found necessary to prolong the period of the drive for another week or two. Thus far the drive has resulted in bringing the aggregate amount of the pledges of the first and the present drives up to $31,000, with $4,000 more in sight. It is even estimated that the total may be exceeded and that a grand total of $36,000 will be realized. The cost of building materials has taken quite a decided drop, so that the cost of building the new edifice which at first was estimated at $54,000, has been reduced to $45,000, and it is said that it may be possible to build the new edifice for $40,000 if there are any further cuts in the cost of building material by next spring. It is an assured fact now that the new edifice will be built next year, building operations to start in the spring.

To Be Community Center. It is planned to make this church the community center in the true sense of the word. A large basement with a seating capacity of 500 persons is to be used for the social service of the community. It is proposed to use this basement for all community gatherings, such as political meetings, bazaars, church entertainments, dairy-men meetings, etc. In fact, all meetings that are of vital interest to the community, irrespective of denomination will be able to find this commodious church parlor always at their service. It is understood, of course, that all theatrical performances and dances will be barred, however, or any gathering that is detrimental to the welfare of the youth of the community.

The response for pledges has been so generous as to surprise the most optimistic members of the soliciting committee. Every one has taken a very keen interest in the proposed undertaking and each one has felt that it will be a big asset to the community at large to have a social center such as is being proposed.

Questionable dances have done much harm to the young people of the small towns and it is the place of the church to offer something better and to keep the young folks on the right path.

Cross Shows Progress Made. A large electric illuminated cross has been placed in the St. John's church, and for every $50 pledged a gold star is shown on the cross. When the cross is filled with these stars they the goal has been reached in the drive. The cross is prettily illuminated with various colored electric light bulbs.

STUENKEL-MARQUARDT WEDDING.

The Contracting Young People Represent Two of the Widely Known Families of Rich Township.

Last Sunday afternoon at the hour of three o'clock, at the Lutheran church, known as Meyer's church, one mile west of Richton, there were united in marriage two of the popular and widely known young people of our community, Melinda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Stuenkel, and Lawrence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Marquardt, Reverend Heiber, pastor of the congregation, officiating.

The bridesmaids were Laura Stuenkel and Adella Marquardt, sisters of the bride and groom. The groom's attendants were his brother, Emil, and the bride's brother, Edwin.

After the ceremony which, notwithstanding the inclement weather, was largely attended, the invited guests assembled at the home of the bride. Supper was served at 6 p. m. The guests were entertained with music, furnished by the Klemme boys, and dancing was indulged in. A midnight luncheon was served.

Lawrence Marquardt was one of the young men of Rich township called upon to serve his country in our late unpleasantness. The young couple will be at home on one of the H. F. Stuenkel farms near the old home, known as the Schumacher farm.

The Journal extends congratulations to the young people and wishes them success all along life's journey.

One Thing Certain.

A New York apartment house advertises several six-room suites at $17,500 a year. We know nothing about these suites, but we do know that the tenant who occupies one of them doesn't make his money picking cotton or working in a sawmill.—House Post.

ORLAND CLUB ENTERTAINS A HOST OF GOBLINS

A Halloween party was given by the Orland Park club which proved to be a big success. It was conducted by Miss Adele Schmaedke and John Humphry. The weather was no drawback. A very large crowd attended. The side shows were a great hit, but the largest attraction was the program. The program consisted of first, a musical selection by Adele Schmaedke, Stewart Loebe and August Schmaedke. Second, a ghost and witch dance acted out by Annabelle Davidson, Ida Schultz and Stella Hahnlien as witches. Howard Hewson, Paul Schultz, Harry Cox and August Schmaedke acting as ghosts, while Lucille Schmaedke acted as little Orphan Annie, whom the witches frightened by their spooky cries. Third, a one-act musical comedy entitled "Scenes in Front of a Clothing Store," acted out by Harry Cox, Hanna Burkhardt, Howard Hewson, Paul Schultz, Wilbur Swanson and August Schmaedke and Ray Ludwig. Fourth, a Japanese dance by Miss Evelyn Elsner of Chicago. Fifth, a farmers' chorus, John Humphry, taking the leading part, accompanied by Harry Cox, Paul Schultz, Howard Hewson and August Schmaedke as the chorus. The last vocal selection, by Miss Schmaedke. The farmers' chorus was the hit of the evening. Doughnuts and coffee were served and the program ended with a dance. There were many out-of-town guests.

John Humphry's aunt, Mrs. Benson, acted as fortune teller. Miss Lois Hodgson and Dorothy Sandford of Joliet were expected to attend, but owing to the weather were unable to be there. Miss Esther Gee brought Miss Orville Busse, a friend of hers, from Englewood High school. There were also many from Palos Park. Every one enjoyed the evening and the club extends an invitation to everyone to attend a play, "Pinto's Dominoes," which will be given in about three weeks.

ORLAND NEWS ITEMS.

The beginners' department of the Orland M. E. church school, consisting of 19 members, were entertained by their teacher, Miss Harriet Austin and Mrs. George Sayers at the home of Miss Austin in Goodings Grove last Saturday. They were transported by Mr. John Loebe by auto. It is needless to say that not only the Halloween party but also the trip there and back was enjoyed. They were accompanied by Miss Alice Jackson. The community is watching with a good deal of interest the progress of these children and their teachers.

October 29 Roy Newton offered at public auction his farm, implements, stock, produce and other articles preparatory to moving to Michigan, where he has purchased a farm. A surprise farewell party was given them Saturday night.

The Orland Park club will hold its next meeting Friday evening, November 5.

Mrs. Armstrong has been appointed by the Tuberculosis Institute of Chicago to succeed Miss Cora Hearne as field nurse in this community. She has already begun her work by examining the High school pupils, whom she found in good condition. Miss Hearne has accepted a good position in Michigan.

A large crowd of young folks gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Daniel on Thursday night to chaperone the young bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper. The correspondent was unable to get returns of the actual program, but judging from the crowd which he saw collected at the Orland Settlement school in the early part of the evening he would say the program was lively throughout and that there was little doubt that John would come across with the treat.

The Orland M. E. church on Saturday, October 23 gave a surprise reception in honor of their pastor's return for his third year's work, and as a token of their appreciation heaped up in table with good things. The pastor in a brief address outlined the work of the coming year and looks forward to the best year of his pastorate; but much depends on the response he receives from the people.

FRANKFORT BOX SOCIAL DRAWS GREAT CROWD

Frankfort, Nov. 5.—The Halloween party and box social which was held at the Frankfort public school Friday night was very largely attended and was a decided success financially.

The school room was prettily decorated with cut outs of black cats, witches, pumpkins, etc. Large shocks of corn were placed around some of the large pillars in the center of the room and pumpkins were concealed in the shocks, while paper owls kept watch over the shocks. A very interesting program was rendered. Following the program the box social was held. Bidding on boxes was very spirited, and some of the boxes were sold as high as $4.50.

The proceeds came to $89. The school room was crowded beyond seating capacity. The new electric lights which were installed last week were used for the first time at this gathering.

BIG CORN CROP IN WEST.

Thomas McGlashen has returned from a ten day trip through Iowa. He reports some very big corn crops there. Corn was 16 feet high in some fields. Husking has been going on rapidly during the recent mild weather.

Farmers in this locality who have been holding their old corn with the hopes that the price would advance have been sadly disappointed. When the price dropped from $2.40 per bushel to below 90 cents some of the farmers let go of their holdings while others are still holding on with the hope that the market will rally. With an abundance of corn having been raised in the western states as well as in our own corn belt it is probable that the supply of corn will be so plentiful as to preclude any heavy advance in price.

ATTEND FUNERAL OF RELATIVE.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Weber went to Iowa last Thursday to attend the funeral of the latter's aunt, Mrs. Benitz. They returned Sunday.

POLL HEAVY VOTE.

Frankfort took quite an interest in politics Tuesday. Workers were out all day getting the voters in. This is a strong Republican town and returned many solid Republican votes. Considerable scratching was done, however, on the candidates for governor, many votes going to Hamilton Lewis in place of Len Small. However, Small received the majority of votes in this precinct.

Through connections with the telephone company regular bulletins were flashed to the hall every ten minutes from 3:30 p. m. until midnight. As quick as the reports came in over the wire they were written on a large blackboard. An eager and large crowd gathered at the hall to get the returns.

PREPARING FOR BAZAAR.

The Ladies' Aid of the St. Peter's Evangelical church are making preparations for the annual bazaar and supper to be held at the church parlors on the afternoon and evening of November 17. Many booths have been arranged for, and many beautiful articles, useful and practical for Christmas gifts will be on sale. Everyone is invited to attend.

ENTERTAIN SEVENTEEN GUESTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Warning entertained Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hunter of Mokena, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hanson of Plainfield and a number of relatives from Chicago over Sunday. In all 17 guests were entertained.

M. C. BALLASTING NEW TRACK.

The Michigan Central has a number of car loads of cinders stored here which are to be used as ballast on the new piece of side track which has been built east of town.

Many of the farmers of this locality who are members of the Will County Farm bureau purchased a supply of potatoes from a car sent here by the bureau. The potatoes were sold to farm bureau members only for $1.14 per bushel, which was said to have been the cost price.

HARDING AND COOLIDGE WIN IN LANDSLIDE

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Senator Warren Gamaliel Harding of Ohio has been elected President of the United States, and Gov. Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts vice president. The victory of the Republican national ticket was most impressive, the popular plurality given it being the largest in the history of American politics.

Cox and Roosevelt, heading the Democratic ticket, won in the states of the solid South, but nearly all the rest of the country went Republican. In states that were admittedly Republican territory, the Harding pluralities were so heavy that many a Republican candidate for lesser office was swept in on the immense tide who otherwise would have been defeated. Practically every state that had been put in the doubtful class by the party managers added its name to the long Republican column. To put it bluntly, the Democratic national ticket was simply snowed under; its defeat was monumental.

League of Nations Repudiated?

Opponents of the League of Nations, accepting the pre-election statements of President Wilson that the result at the polls would show how the people stood in regard to the league covenant, loudly and joyously claimed that the popular verdict was repudiation of the league. But the sober minded ones were more disposed to attribute the great Republican victory rather to dissatisfaction with the Wilson administration and the determination to have a change. Republican condemnation of the policies of the present administration must be held to be justified by the people, and the reversal of many of those policies assured by the election of a house of representatives in which the Republicans will have a majority of seventy-five. In the senate they will have six or eight majority.

By ten o'clock of election night the result was no longer in doubt. New York had given its 45 votes to Harding and Coolidge by a plurality estimated at more than a million. In rapid succession came Pennsylvania with 33, Illinois 23, New Jersey 14, Vermont 4, Maine 3, Rhode Island 5, New Hampshire 4, Connecticut 7, Massachusetts 18, Kansas, 10, Ohio 24, Colorado 6, Michigan 15, Indiana 15, Wisconsin 13, and Nebraska 8. With such certainly Republican states as California, Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Washington and Oregon to be heard from, the election of Harding was assured. The metropolitan Democratic press conceded the defeat of Cox, and it was all over but the counting and the shouting.

Some Significant Incidents.

Here are some of the interesting and significant things that the electors did: New Hampshire, which gave Wilson a plurality of 56 votes four years ago, returned to the Republican column with a big Harding vote. Boston, which has been Democratic since the days of McKinley, abandoned that party for the G. O. P. In Ohio, which was made the main battleground of the candidates and which is the home state of both, the plurality for Harding was claimed by the Republicans to be 250,000 and admitted by the Democrats to be 100,000. President Wilson's home district in Princeton, N. J., went for Harding and Coolidge by about 5 to 1. Hyde Park, N. Y., the home town of Franklin D. Roosevelt, gave Harding, 279; Cox, 194.

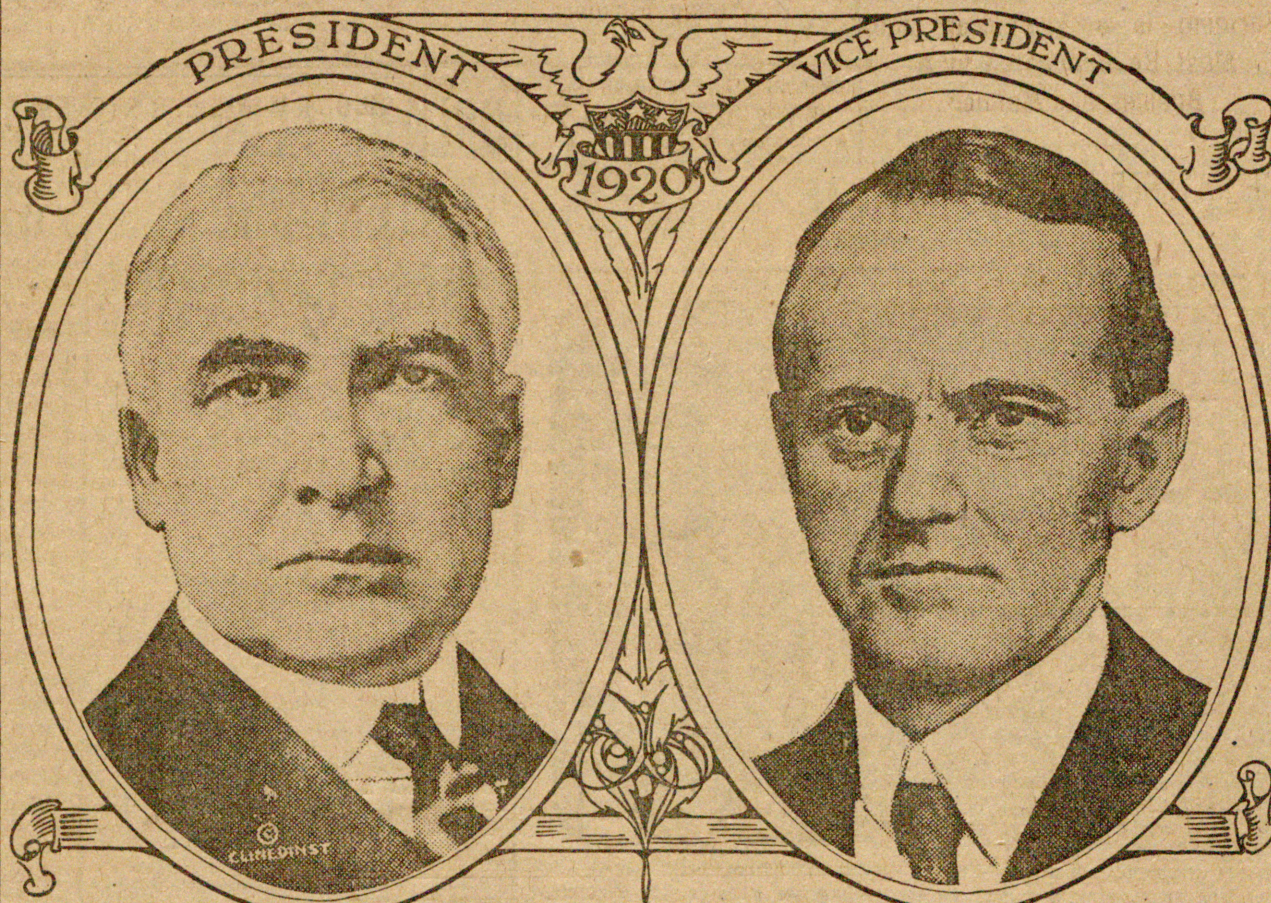

The large cities, which generally gave Wilson large pluralities four years ago, as a rule added to the Republican victory by huge Harding votes. In such places as New York, Chicago and Milwaukee the vote for Debs, the Socialist candidate, was remarkably heavy, and it was said many Democrats cast their ballots for the prisoner in the Atlanta penitentiary. The total Socialist vote was the largest that party ever cast in this country—a fact which was not overlooked by far-seeing political economists.

How the Women Voted.

A notable feature of the election was the action of the newly enfranchised women of America. President Wilson, Governor Cox and other warm supporters of the League of Nations had declared repeatedly their firm belief that the women would come to the rescue of the league and hence of the Democratic ticket because of their supposed hatred of war. But a hasty analysis of the vote shows that those gentlemen were deceived. The gentler sex merely added to the huge Republican plurality. It may be doubted whether this shows their attitude toward the league any more than did the votes of vast numbers of men. The women, like their husbands, brothers and sons, were determined to have a change of administration. They went to the polls in force, too, eager to cast their ballots and refusing to be deterred by the rain and snow that prevailed in some regions. Down South, where the Democratic ticket was sure to win, not so many women voted, and in some cities, notably Savannah, Ga., the negro women were not permitted to exercise the franchise on the ground that they had not registered early enough.

G. O. P. Gains in Congress.

Contests for the senate and the house fairly divided interest with the fight over the presidency in many parts of the country and in some instances they were bitter. On the whole the Republicans made considerable gains in both senate and house. In New Hampshire, despite the hot manager and who had been his close friend for years, was one of those who received the election figures in Marion.

Grateful, Not Exultant.

Late in the night Senator Harding sat down in his library and penciled the following statement: "Assuming that the returns are wholly dependable I do not hesitate to say that I am pleased."

"Of course I am happy to utter my gratitude, but I am not exultant. It is not a personal victory."

"It is a renewed expression of confident Americanism and a national call to the Republican party. It is also serious."

"The American obligations are so solemn that instead of exulting I am more given to prayer to God to make me capable of playing my part and that all these calls to responsibility may meet the aspirations and expectations of America and the world. I am sure the people who have voted the Republican ticket will understand my feeling that I should make no instant statement of policies at this time beyond the expression made throughout the campaign."

Going to Texas and Panama.

Senator Harding said that throughout the campaign it had been his intention, win or lose, to take a vacation during the month of November. He and Mrs. Harding are to leave Marion in a few days for a visit in Point Isabel, Tex., near Brownsville, as the guests of "Ed" Scobey, a close personal friend of the senator. According to plans, they will remain at Point Isabel for about two weeks, going from there to Galveston, where they will take passage on a steamer to Panama. Following a trip through the canal zone, the President-elect and Mrs. Harding will return to New Orleans, going from there to Bedford, Va.

Marion probably will be the headquarters of the next President during the winter and up until the time when he goes to Washington for his inauguration in March. It is understood that the visit to Panama will be purely a pleasure trip, as neither the senator nor Mrs. Harding have ever seen the canal. No cabinet appointments are to be determined upon during this trip.

Governor and Mrs. Cox Vote Early.

Governor Cox and Mrs. Cox were early voters at the polling place in Charrmonte, a suburb of Dayton. The vote cast by Mrs. Cox was not her first, she having lived in Illinois and voted at a state election a few years ago. In the voting booth here she showed her knowledge of the old Australian ballot, marking up four different forms composing it, in two minutes and beating her husband by thirty seconds. The governor went to his farm in the afternoon and returned to Dayton in the early evening. He received the returns in the office of his newspaper.

"WISE AND JUST VERDICT"

Republican Chairman Will Hays Says There is New Glory to the Stars and Stripes.

In a statement on the election, Republican Chairman Will Hays said: "Once more the American people in a real crisis have rendered a wise and just verdict. Certainly in no instance they have spoken in unmistakable terms. America is still first. There is new glory to the Stars and Stripes."

"Hourly the majorities increase. Both the electoral and popular Harding and Coolidge vote will be absolutely unprecedented. We will have a majority of at least 14 in the senate and an overwhelming majority in the house. We are grateful."

NO BITTERNESS, SAYS WHITE

Democratic National Chairman Declares He Accepts Result "Cheerfully, if With Forboding."

George White, chairman of the Democratic national committee, conceding Senator Harding's election, said:

"The abandonment by some of the most prominent Republicans of the League of Nations which they helped to construct has been successful."

"The people have succumbed to the confusion wrought by these distinguished men and to the misrepresentations of those who would not and did not understand the League of Nations."

"I hope it may be rescued from the political morass and be saved to mankind."

"No one has any occasion for bitterness or recrimination."

"What the whole people decide the whole people must accept. The Democratic national committee abides by the result cheerfully, if with forboding."

"Senator Harding is the people's President. In this election Republican propaganda has been shrewdly directed to induce the descendants of six European nations to vote as six European nations instead of one American nation. They have inveigled these Americans to vote with their thoughts across the seas instead of on this country."

Another Royal Suggestion DOUGHNUTS and CRULLERS From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

DOUGHNUTS!
There is nothing more wholesome and delightful than doughnuts or crullers rightly made.

Doughnuts
3 tablespoons shortening
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Cream shortening; add sugar and well-beaten egg; stir in milk; add nutmeg, salt, flour and baking powder which have been sifted together and enough additional flour to make dough stiff enough to roll. Roll out on floured board to about 3/4-inch thick; cut out. Fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a piece of bread in 60 seconds. Drain on unglazed paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Crullers
4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1/2 cup milk

Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and beaten eggs; sift together flour, cinnamon, salt and baking powder; add one-half and mix well; add milk and remainder of dry ingredients to make soft dough. Roll out on floured board to about 1/4-inch thick and cut into strips about 4 inches long and 1/2-inch wide; roll in hands and twist each strip and bring ends together. Fry in deep hot fat. Drain and roll in powdered sugar.

"I am glad I broke my engagement with Tom," Mabel observed indignantly. "He's no real gentleman."

"Why, I have always thought him one," Tess commented in surprise. "What has he done?"

"Well, I sent him back his presents—that is, all except the diamond ring and a few other things that I thought I was really entitled to, considering how many times he had taken dinner at our house and all, and asked him to return mine."

"Well, did he refuse?"
"He did not. He not only sent back a box of cigars, unopened, and a pen wiper and a knit necktie, but he sent also five boxes of face powder, saying that he estimated that to be about the quantity he had taken away on his coat during the time we were engaged."

Poppy as Memorial Flower.

The poppy seems fated to go down into history as the "memorial flower of the American Legion." It was the common scarlet variety of that flower that grows so freely in waste places that won the regard of the men overseas. For it bloomed on about them, and often the flower was the only beautiful thing the soldiers saw for days upon days.

The poppy is one of the oldest flowers in the world's literature, and has been sung in verse and mentioned in holy books by all races. The Oriental poppies are of orange-crimson with black centers and large seed bags which burst and scatter the seed in all directions. Other famous varieties include the slender Iceland poppy, the yellow California variety and the big double flowers. None of them have any perfume, but depend upon their beauty of form and color to attract and hold the senses.

G. O. P. VICTOR IN ILLINOIS

Republican National and State
Tickets Indorsed.

HARDING'S PLURALITY 275,000

Len Small, for Governor, Easily Defeats Ex-Senator Lewis—Landslide Carries Down Practically All Democratic Candidates for Office.

The Illinois results on president and governor worked out on an average
lead per precinct as shown by the actual precincts heard from give Harding a plurality of 800,000 and Small one of 500,000.

The State ticket elected is as follows:

United States Senator, William B.
McKinley (R.).
Governor, Len Small (R.).
Lieutenant Governor, Fred Sterling
(R.).
Secretary of State, Louis L. Emmerson (R.).
Auditor, Andrew Russell (R.).
Treasurer, Edward E. Miller (R.).
Attorney General, Edward J. Brundage (R.).
Clerk Supreme Court, Charles W.
Vail (R.).
Trustees University of Illinois,
Laura B. Evans (R.), Helen M. Grigs-
by (R.), William L. Noble (R.).

Springfield, Nov. 3.—Harding and Coolidge have swept Illinois by a plurality which incomplete returns indicated would be better than half a million votes.

Len Small, Republican candidate for governor, is elected over James Hamilton Lewis, his Democratic rival, by a plurality estimated by Republican leaders at from 200,000 to 250,000, with some promise that it will be increased.

Returns from 1,061 precincts out of 5,730 in the state, including 475 in Cook county, give Harding 239,522;

Governor-Elect SMALL.

Cox, 85,782. If this ratio of gains is maintained Harding's plurality in the state will be 825,120.

Small Lead Piles Up.

By the same system of tabulation,
returns from 650 precincts in the state being considered, Small could have a lead of 500,000. This lead, however, Republican chieftains do not expect.

In Cook county Senator Harding's plurality will be tremendous. Early figures from 425 out of the 2,210 precincts in the city give the Republican nominee an estimated lead, should the ratio be maintained, of 335,920. Returns from 450 out of 2,210 precincts
in Chicago give Small 86,330 and Lewis 58,899, a plurality for Small of 27,431. If this ratio is maintained
Small will have a city lead over Lewis of 134,810.

The greatest plurality ever given an Illinois governor was that of Charles S.
Deneen when he defeated Lawrence
B. Stringer in 1904 by 209,149.

McKinley Easy Winner.

Congressman William B. McKinley
has been elected United States senator over his Democratic rival, Peter
A. Waller, by another tremendous plurality, which will run something less than that of Senator Harding, but should approach at least 300,000 or 350,000.

With the Harding-Small landslide
the entire Republican state ticket has been swept into office.

Len Small, for governor, wins the down state counties with a margin of at least 350,000, on an estimate made

School Proposition Up Again.

Edinburg.—Voters in this community who invalidated the Edinburg community high school district at a previous election by voting to erect the school on land later found to be within the banks of a river, went further in their third election recently and voted an eighty-five plurality against the school. The second election defeated the proposal, and on the third
election, just held, defeat was repeated, but by a much smaller plurality.
A fourth attempt will be made.

after a tabulation of about one-eighth of the 3,257 downstate precincts. His plurality in Chicago will be at least 130,000, and may get as high as 150,- 000, and the country towns of Cook county will add between 30,000 and 40,000 more to his total.

Harding Carries Every County.

Returns received showed that the Democratic presidential ticket had not carried a single downstate county.
Indications also were that Small for governor had made a similarly clean sweep of the state.

Every candidate on the Republican state ticket was elected by an overwhelming majority. The state ticket ran substantially with the Harding-Coolidge electors outside of Chicago.

While Mr. Small probably runs 150,- 000 or so behind Harding outside of Cook county, McKinley for senator and all the minor state office candidates win out with big majorities.

Legislature With Small.

Mr. Small will enter the governor's office with a general assembly that will go along with him on a Republican program. This has been determined by conferences that have been held already between Republicans of the senate—both holdovers and men who were elected Tuesday—and by informal conferences that have been held by perhaps a majority of the Republicans
who will be in the next house of representatives.

Cleanup All the Way.

From Waukegan to Cairo and from Danville to Quincy it was a Republican mop-up. Counties that never have given Republican majorities since they were constituted were swept into the Republican column. Even Pike county, that insisted on going 2,000
Democratic in 1904, was Republican Tuesday.

Complete returns may show a few of the 101 downstate ballistics that remain true to time-honored Democratic traditions. In 1904 each of the downstate congressional districts elected Republican congressmen, and this,
it is indicated, is what happened Tuesday, the only congressional seat down-state in any doubt whatever being that of Congressman Henry T. Rainey in the Jacksonville district.

Vote in Aurora-Joliet District.

The Aurora-Joliet district came through with a Republican plurality of 49,000 for Harding and 37,000 for Small. Winnebago county turned in a 13,000 Republican lead, with Small running about 3,000 votes behind.
Western Illinois showed that Small
would have had trouble in a close presidential vote. In the Peoria, Bloomington and Decatur districts he ran within 80 per cent of the Harding vote.

In his own district—Uncle Joe Cannon's—he ran neck and neck with Harding. In Springfield territory
Small was out, but from the state capital on through the five southern congressional districts the ballots went into the boxes nearly all of them
marked in the circle and Small's plurality was only a shade under Harding's.

Only a Question of Plurality.

Chicago went so tremendously for the Republican candidates that there was no question about Small's election
after the first twenty precincts had reported. When a hundred had come in it was only a proposition of ultimate size, and the later returns continually increased the aggregate for Small.

Republicans Get Congressmen.

The Republicans have probably captured the entire congressional delegation from Chicago. At present there are six Republican congressmen and four Democratic.

It is reasonably certain the Republicans will have eight or nine seats in the next house, and probably the tenth.

Harding's Chicago plurality far exceeds the landslide to Roosevelt in 1904, even after due consideration is given to the fact that women voted
Tuesday and did not in 1904.

Senate Safely Republican.

Comparatively meager returns on legislative contests indicated that the Republicans had made a clean sweep
as far as the state senate is concerned, electing all their candidates for the twenty-seven seats to be filled. The only Democrats who will sit in the senate when it meets next January are the eight holdovers.

The senate will be composed of forty-two Republicans and the eight hold-over Democrats. There will probably be one vacancy from the First district
of Chicago. Senator Francis P. Brady, a holdover Republican senator, was elected clerk of the appellate court Tuesday and will probably retire from the senate. There is already an understanding that his seat will be filled
in April by the election of a colored Republican, the district including a large portion of the Second ward.

The minority system of representation saved the Democrats from losses
of seats in the legislature as striking as those in the senate. In most districts in the state there were really no contests, one party having nominated two, the other one, thus assuring all three nominees of their seats.

Assemblymen Seek Re-election.

Springfield.—Among the candidates for the Illinois house of representatives there were 111 present members running for re-election. Sixty-three of them were Republicans and 48 Democrats. Both the present congressmen-at-large and 20 district congressmen
out of 25 were running for re-election,
and for state senate 14 candidates
were present members seeking another term. Most of the candidates, it is expected, will be returned to the legislature.

KEEP SUITABLE FARM ACCOUNTS

Farming Is a Profession and Must Be Conducted in a Businesslike Manner

HELPS CREDIT AT THE BANK

Once the Principles of Bookkeeping
Are Understood a Simple System
Can Be Developed to Meet
the Farmer's Needs.

Farmer Jones desired to negotiate a loan at his local bank.

"Just what is your financial condition?" the banker asked him.

"Why," said Jones, "I own a house and land, and a couple of horses and some cows and live stock, and an orchard and—"

"Have you a detailed inventory showing the value of these things?" the banker interrupted him.

"No—o," the farmer replied. "I haven't time to bother keeping books."

"Good gracious, man!" exclaimed
the banker, "anyone can keep books.
The way the thing's worked out nowadays it doesn't require more than five minutes' work a day. Then when you come here for a loan you could produce a sheet of paper and say,
'Here's what I've got, here's what I owe, and here's what I'd have in cash
if I sold out tomorrow.' As it is, I'm afraid I can't let you have the money
until I have this information."

This conversation takes place in hundreds of towns every day, according to specialists of the office of farm
management and farm economics,
United States department of agriculture. Of course farmers are very busy men. They haven't the time to study complicated accounting methods. But,
according to the federal specialists,
once the principles of bookkeeping are understood and all farm conditions
studied, a simple system of bookkeeping can be developed to meet the farmer's needs.

Show Assets and Liabilities.
The foundation of any set of books
is an inventory showing the farmer's assets and liabilities. The assets include real estate, live stock, machinery

Farmer's Wife Proves an Able Assistant in Keeping Farm Accounts.

and tools, produce, feed and supplies,
cash on hand and in bank, and accounts receivable at the date the inventory is taken. Each item under these headings should be listed separately. Real estate should be valued at what it can be sold for under normal conditions; live stock, feed and farm produce at market prices, less cost of marketing; farm supplies at cost; machinery and tools at a price allowing for annual depreciation. The liabilities should include mortgages, notes and accounts payable. The sum of the liabilities deducted from the total assets will show the farmer's net
worth.

Classification of Accounts.

While an inventory is generally the first thing a banker asks for when making a loan he also wants to know the sources of income. By going just a little further the farmer can keep records that will enable him to know his profits and losses. This requires a classification of accounts in which certain principles should be followed. The precise classification to be used is determined by the prevailing conditions
on the farm in question.

Full details regarding the various phases of farm bookkeeping are contained in Farmers' Bulletin 511, "Farm Bookkeeping;" Farmers' Bulletin 572,
"A System of Farm Cost Accounting,"
and Farmers' Bulletin 782, "The Use of a Diary for Farm Accounts." These bulletins can be had upon request of the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

APPLICATION OF PHOSPHATE

On Poorly Managed Farms a Mixed Fertilizer Can Undoubtedly Be Used With Profit.

"Knowing that corn receives much manure and usually follows clover or well-managed farms, a logical investment," says Prof. Firman E. Bear of the soils department of the Ohio State university, "is in a larger application of phosphate." On farms that have been poorly managed, a mixed fertilizer can undoubtedly be used with profit. He says that until such a time as the price of potash is materially reduced, it would appear that it is wise for the farmer to invest liberally
in limestone, phosphate and clover seed.

HOW TO SELECT BEEF CALF AND RAISE IT

Bulletin Written Especially for Young Farmers.

Desirable and Undesirable Types of Calves Are Discussed and Illustrated—Importance of Changing Its Ration.

For the prodigal who has finally turned away from growing inferior, unprofitable, and uninteresting live stock
the United States department of Agriculture has prepared a special farmers' bulletin, No. 1135. Under the title
"The Beef Calf: Its Growth and Development," this new publication,
written principally for young farmers,

A Good Type of Bull Calf.

tells how to select a beef calf and how to raise it either for market or for use as a breeding animal.

The bulletin is a response to an unusual demand by members of boys' and girls' clubs for specific information on the principles and practices of raising well-bred calves, preparing them for show or sale, and disposing of them to advantage. Desirable and undesirable types of calves are discussed and illustrated.

There are chapters on equipment
needed, keeping the calf healthy, feeding, and the importance of changing the ration as the animal develops, also methods of preventing parasites and disease. The bulletin describes clearly how to clip, curl, or otherwise prepare the coat of the various breeds of cattle preparatory to showing them,
with additional directions regarding shipping and exhibiting. Persons desiring such information should write to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Farmers' Bulletin 1135.

PLOW LEVEL SOILS IN FALL

Stubborn Sodds Are More Surely Exterminated and Moisture Supply Is Greatly Increased.

If all ground was level we might make the assertion that all soils are benefited by fall plowing as there is much to be gained through this practice. Level soils that do not wash are benefited since stubborn sods are more easily exterminated and the moisture supply for the crop the following spring is greatly increased; however,
hilly land or that inclined to wash is damaged by being fall plowed. The available plant foods are washed out, gullies are made in the hillsides and the fields are subject to weathering during the winter. The fertility of sandy soils or soils that are rolling is best conserved by plowing only in the spring and then as late
as possible in order to get the crop
out on time.

SUGAR BEET CROP IS LARGE

Bureau of Crop Estimates Puts Total
at Nearly Nine Million Tons—Hits Sugar Prices.

According to the bureau of crop estimates the United States will harvest
this year nearly 9,000,000 tons of beets or 2,000,000 tons more than the normal crop. Normally in the United States we produce about 17 pounds of beet sugar per capita, whereas this year we shall produce about 21 or 22 pounds of beet sugar per capita. This extra four or five pounds of beet
sugar will doubtless have something to do with reducing sugar prices to a more reasonable basis during the next year.

FRESH AIR QUITE IMPORTANT

Chicken House Should Be Provided
With Good Ventilating System
Without Drafts.

Chickens seem to require more fresh air than do cattle or swine. An authority even says the amount of air breathed by a hen is three times greater than that required by cows or pigs.
Give the poultry house plenty of ventilation without drafts; plenty of oxygen without cracks for the wind to enter.

TIME LOST TO MAKE REPAIRS

Farmer Would Not Be Compelled to Stop to Fix Machines if Given Proper Attention.

Man is like a machine. If kept in good working order each day he will seldom have to stop for repairs. More time is lost in making repairs than could possibly be used in taking care
of machines in order to prevent the necessity of repairs.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUT WIRELESS SYSTEM

The district communication superintendents of the United States navy,
who are in charge of the navy wireless stations, have for several months
broadcasted messages for the Boy Scouts of America, and the experiment has been so productive of results that they have indicated their willingness to co-operate in a system which will enable the scout headquarters to reach
every scout in the country on short notice when they are needed for public service.

To give wireless amateurs a chance to practice NAH, the New York station and others sent out news for boy scouts and other boys every day at slow speed.

All that is necessary in order to take advantage of the plan is to form
a connection with the nearest scout headquarters that has a wireless receiving station and secure the weather
reports, finals in athletic events, and other news. All boy scout headquarters are expected to get their information either by wireless direct or through some other scout organization that has a radio station. As there are 250,000 amateur radio stations in the United States it is not difficult even for a single troop to connect with the navy
wireless service and pass information along for the benefit of the public. A scout organization which fails to do its part in this big plan is decidedly behind the times.

The Seaside Radio Commodore, 200
Fifth avenue, sends free of charge information sheets for wireless amateurs
who want copies of the confidential
code in which some of the messages are sent out. The public needs only to insist, gently but firmly, that the scouts shall keep them informed, and help the scouts in such ways as they can.

COW CLUBS FOR SCOUTS.

The United States department of agriculture is advocating boys' cow
clubs, and this is appealing to large numbers of Boy Scouts of America in different parts of the country. There are many calf clubs, for years the banks having encouraged boys to raise calves by lending money with which to buy them, raise and sell them and repay the bank. Dairy enthusiasts believe that it is even more sensible to take care of the calves after they become cows, making the cow pay for herself in from one to two years provided, of course, there is an available market for the milk and cream which she gives.

One of the objects sought is to interest the boy in dairying for profit, but the dairy specialists think that it will
at the same time deepen the boy's interest in other things. For instance, the cow might become the basis of a boy's arithmetic study.

Arithmetic is not related to life in the minds of most boys. Figures for them are just figures, that's all. But if multiplication means ten quarts of milk from the boy's own cow at 15
cents a quart, or four pounds of cream
multiplied by 40 cents at the creamery door—well, cow arithmetic is something practical.

SCOUTS CAMP IN BALLROOM.

As a boy scout enthusiast there are few if any men who can beat John McE. Bowman, president of the Commodore and allied hotels in New York. And he proved it by perhaps the most gracious single act that has ever been done for the organization.
Upon their return from Europe, he entertained the entire Boy Scouts of America "jamboree" delegation of 357
scouts and leaders as his personal guests at the Commodore for the days
they stayed in New York while arranging transportation to their homes
throughout the country.

The night they arrived they were given a banquet by Mr. Bowman, the guests including relatives and friends of the scouts to the number of over 600. There the scouts got green corn and pie a la mode for the first time since they sailed for Europe two months before. While they were Mr. Bowman's guests the boys "camped out" in the grand ballroom, the largest hotel room in the world; they slept on cots supplied by the army.

HOW TO BE A VETERAN SCOUT.

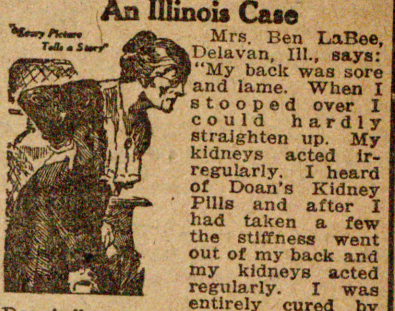

If you have had five years' service
in the Boy Scouts of America, and are a first-class scout, you are eligible to membership in the Veteran Scout association. The veteran scout agrees to take as active a part in scouting as circumstances will permit and to continue to live up to the obligations
of the scout oath and law.

VARIOUS SERVICES OF SCOUTS.

Timely assistance on the part of Lloyd Dymont, fourteen years old, son of Police Captain Dyer Dymont of Tacoma, Wash., probably saved Malcolm Albright, eleven, from drowning in Wapato slough in that city. The boy was going down for the third time when young Dymont jumped into the water, grabbed him by his shirt collar
and swam with him safely to shore.
First aid treatment was applied and
the lad was revived.

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Here is another letter that makes me
happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars."

"Money isn't everything in this world.
There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 35 cents

Dear Sirs:—
"I was an untold sufferer from old running sores and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain.
A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years,
and after using just nine dollars' worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 8 inches by 6 inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again."

"You may use this to recommend your

MAKING WAR ON DISEASE MENACE

American Red Cross Announces Budget of $48,200,000 For Current Year.

NEW DISASTER RELIEF PLAN

Continuance of Heavy Work Abroad Deemed Necessary to Protect United States—$21,000,000 Less Than Last Year.

A program of relief and service toward which appropriations of $48,200,000 have been made has been outlined for the American Red Cross for the fiscal year, July 1, 1920, to July 1, 1921, according to official announcement by national headquarters of the organization at Washington. The figures for 1920-21 are $21,000,000 below those of 1919-20, in which $69,400,000 was spent.

Important among the items of the budget for the present year is the appropriation of $11,500,000 for relief in foreign lands, which includes $11,000,000 in purchased supplies on hand and not distributed.

Must Protect United States. This will enable the American Red Cross to continue its humanitarian effort to aid stricken peoples to re-establish themselves, to fight the disease epidemics which threaten many countries and to offset largely the remaining traces of the blight left by the World War. It is regarded as social as well as physical sanitation on a large scale that will have a direct bearing on future conditions in America.

Central Europe, the chief sufferer from the conflict, today is facing another winter of famine, pestilence and ruin. Typhus decreased much during the summer months where last winter it had its greatest stronghold, but physicians who investigated the situation at the behest of the League of Red Cross Societies have given their unqualified opinion that this coming winter will see a recurrence on an unprecedented scale. The Red Cross feels it must continue preventive measures abroad to keep this and other deadly maladies from the United States.

Millions for Work at Home. When the disease was sweeping Central Europe last winter the American Red Cross, with the aid of the governments of afflicted nations, undertook the fight against it. Hospitals were established wherever possible and food and clothing were distributed to the undernourished populations, who by reason of their undernourishment were easy prey to the epidemics. Where disorganization contributed last year to the great inroads made by the disease, victory of its knowledge of the disease and the presence of well established hospital centers, the American Red Cross this year will undertake the work with a new confidence.

Including the total of $11,000,000 in supplies left from the last fiscal year, the $21,000,000 is $21,000,000 less than the expenditures for 1919-20. Appropriations for domestic activities total $16,700,000. The largest item of this "home" budget is $7,800,000 for civilian relief work. This includes service and assistance for families of soldiers, sailors and marines, and work incidental to disaster. Of the total appropriation for civilian relief, $5,000,000 is held in reserve for the carrying out of actual disaster relief.

Reduced Overhead Expense. The Red Cross invariably is the first thought of a community visited by calamity. With this in mind, it was determined by the Executive Committee in preparing the budget of 1919-20 to have a fixed reserve fund from which to draw in these instances. For assistance to soldiers, sailors and marines in hospitals and in camps this year $1,000,000 has been set aside. Four million two hundred thousand dollars has been appropriated for improvement of health and prevention of disease throughout the United States during the current twelve months. The Red Cross is co-operating fully with the United States Health Service in this work and through its Junior Red Cross is doing much to spread among children the principles of sanitation. An appropriation of $1,000,000 has been made for developing the peace time program of the Red Cross by service to its chapters in all regions.

The appropriation of $48,200,000 is exclusive of the local expenditures of the 3,000 or more chapters. Administration expenses this year will be $1,800,000. Last year they were $2,300,000.

The MYSTERY of HARTLEY HOUSE

by Clifford S. Raymond
Illustrated by Irwin Myers Copyright by George H. Doran Co.

JED ABDUCTED.

Synopsis.—Dr. John Michelson, just beginning his career, becomes resident physician and companion of Homer Sidney at Hartley house. Mr. Sidney is an American, a semi-invalid, old and rich and very desirous to live. Mrs. Sidney is a Spanish woman, dignified and reticent. Jed, the butler, acts like a privileged member of the family. The family has come from Montevideo, South America. Hartley house is a fine old isolated country place, with a murder story, a "haunted pool," and many watchdogs, and an atmosphere of mystery. The "haunted pool" is where Richard Dobson, son of a former owner of Hartley house, had killed his brother, Arthur Dobson. Jed begins operations by locking the doctor in his room the very first night. Doctor John fixes his eyes on him. He can't be locked in. He meets Isobel, daughter of the house, and falls in love at first sight. In the night he finds the butler drunk and holding Mrs. Sidney by the wrist. He interferes. Mrs. Sidney makes light of it. John buys a revolver. John overhears Jed telling Mrs. Sidney he will have his way. In reply she says she will not hesitate to kill him. Mrs. Sidney asks John to consent to the announcement of his engagement to Isobel. The young people consent to the make-believe engagement. Later they find it is to head off Jed, who would marry Isobel. Jed tries to kill John, but the matter is smoothed over. John, though "engaged" to Isobel, conceals his love. Mr. Sidney visits a nearby prison and has Dobson, the murderer, pointed out. Jed tells the story of the Dobson murder. The family goes to South America for the winter. John is left at home, but the "engagement" is not broken. John hears the story of a tragedy "that might have happened in Montevideo." The family returns. A mysterious Spanish sailor appears. Jed recognizes him and wants to kill him. The sailor plays burglar. Mr. Brown, "attorney" for the sailor, calls on John and makes demands.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

"I cannot correct your convictions," I said. "You must use your best judgment. You have our permission to do anything that suggests itself to you."

"You're going to brazen it out," he cried.

"We are not going to do anything at all," I said, "not seeing any necessity for doing anything. I might merely suggest to you that there are legal provisions against blackmail."

The quiet little man, with his notions of profit evaporating, suddenly became savage and desperate.

"I can't be fooled with," he cried. "I know you. You won't assault me with a blackmail charge, because you do not dare. I know I am guilty and can be punished unless I have a real hold on this family. I have taken the chance that I have a real hold. It was not certain, but now I know it. It is not enough of a hold, but it is enough to keep you from making trouble for me, and I'll see that soon it will be enough to make you listen to me."

"You Are in for Trouble," He Said. "We Know What You Have, and We'll Get It."

"You may do anything you want to do," I said.

He became quiet and cunning again. "Then, if you don't mind, I'd like to speak to Jed," he said.

I rang for him.

When Jed came, the little shabby lawyer became excited again and got up out of his chair to shake his finger at Jed.

"You are in for trouble," he said. "We know what you have, and we'll get it. They don't dare stop us, and I want to give you notice that you are marked. That's all. You'll be followed and hounded and run down in the end, and there'll be an end to this superciliousness here. It may be when you're dead."

"That's a threat, and the people in this house can make the best of it. I'm in this case to stay, and my Spanish client is not easily discouraged or controlled. You have chosen to deal with us in this fashion. We'll get the rest of this evidence, and we'll make you pay ten times more than we'd be willing to settle for now. We've got an equity in this matter, and we're going to collect it. We know all about you, my friend Jed, and we'll show you that we do. Where's my cane and hat? I'm going to get out of here. You'll regret it."

"Jed," I said, "show the gentleman where the door is and don't let the dogs attack him on the way out."

A disappointed shyster went away in a hurry. I was not only perplexed but alarmed. Of the rapacity of the little man, of his lack of conscience and morals, I had no doubt at all. My only question was whether he could make his malevolence and cupidity effective.

Jed showed him to the door and then came back. I could see that he was frightened nearly to death.

CHAPTER IX.

We had seen nothing of Dravada or the lawyer for nearly three weeks. I was unable to think that we had heard the last of them. Dravada's purpose had been too long nourished and the lawyer's cupidity was too great for either to abandon his intent. Jed's disposition was resilient, and soon he recovered his poise. He thought his enemies had abandoned their intent.

It was a relief to me when going to bed and lying a few minutes awake, to hear the rush and scurry of the dogs about the place. They were active at night. Rabbits, coons, weasels and occasionally a fox kept them moving.

Jed's courage returned—and with it, I was disturbed to observe, a threat of another fit of temper. It showed itself first in moodiness and then in insolence. I was glad to find that Jed in this mood this time was not directing himself against Mrs. Sidney. He had turned against me. I knew that he was in torment again. He had nothing to say to me unless he saw me in Mr. Sidney's room. Then he was pleasant.

"Jed," I said to him one morning, "I know you better than you think I do. You'll torment yourself until you do something you'll regret."

"Go to the devil," said Jed.

Isobel and I had been progressing as rationally as two young people could, situated with regard to each other as we were.

One evening I had been reading and Isobel had gone to the piano. I had put my book down on my knees as she began to play. Then I was aroused by perceiving, without seeing, that somebody was near me.

I turned suddenly and saw Jed. He was not three feet behind my chair. His face revealed disorder of mind.

"Do you want a cocktail?" he asked.

"No," I said.

Isobel touched the keys of the piano, as a player done with a mood may do to express surfeit or conclusion.

"Not a mild one?" Jed asked, persisting.

"Well, then, very weak," I said.

I took up my book again and forced myself, as discipline, to read. I had not been able to do it so long as Isobel played, but now that she had stopped I might at least try.

I made an effort. I tried to keep my attention on the type. It was no use. After fifteen minutes' reading I found that I had not turned a page. Neither had Jed brought the cocktail. I got up and walked about the library. I went to the front entrance to find if a few deep breaths in the open would not produce tranquillity.

As I stood at the entrance Isobel came running toward it. I heard her before I saw her. She was running and gasping. She came up the steps, saw me, controlled herself and tried to appear undisturbed. She might have succeeded, but a sleeve of her gown was torn from her waist and had fallen to her wrist.

"What has happened to you?" I asked.

"Nothing," she said.

"You are running."

"A little exercise."

"Look at your sleeve," I said.

She clutched at it as if she had become conscious of it for the first time, and then ran by me and indoors.

We met at dinner twenty minutes later. Jed did not serve us. Dinner was delayed ten minutes. Then two maids undertook the service. Mrs. Sidney asked for Jed. One of the maids said that he had not appeared and they were doing the best they could without him.

"Why, what can have happened to Jed?" Mrs. Sidney exclaimed.

"What did happen to Jed?" I asked.

Isobel after dinner when we were alone.

"I don't know," she said.

"Who tore your sleeve?"

"Jed," she said with resolute frankness.

"Where is he?"

"I don't know."

"Where were you when he did it?"

"At the edge of the woods. I had gone out for a bit of air—just across the lawn. Jed appeared."

"What did he say?"

"I don't know—something incoherent, violent; and he took me by the sleeve. I was not frightened, but I drew back suddenly. My sleeve ripped out. We were at the edge of the woods. Three men appeared, strangled Jed before he could cry out, picked him up and carried him off."

I spent the evening with Mr. Sidney and told him that Jed was ill. He was concerned, and I made the lie a kindly one.

"It is insignificant," I said. "With his habits he must occasionally pay a price. A touch of indigestion this time."

To extemporize a few lies to get through the night was easy enough; but Jed was not back in the morning, and Mr. Sidney had to be deceived in more enduring fashion.

I explained to him that Jed had been called away on an urgent matter, which seemed to Mrs. Sidney to justify his going at once. Mrs. Sidney, at my request, made the same explanation later, and Mr. Sidney accepted it. This explanation seemed very lame to me, but it served. Mr. Sidney did not know of any reason why Jed should disappear. We offered him an explanation of the servant's absence, and he accepted it.

It was apparent that the Spaniard and the lawyer had been two of the men concerned in Jed's plight, and I thought it best to telephone a discreet detective agency and have the lawyer put under scrutiny. Mrs. Sidney thought this was a proper course—or at least that no better one was available.

Two days later the detectives reported that the lawyer had disappeared from all his accustomed places and that it might require some time to get trace of him.

Jed had been gone four days when one of the maids asked for a month's leave. Her mother was very sick, she said. Mrs. Sidney agreed willingly, although disliking to have an unfamiliar servant in the house to fill this maid's place for the time she would be gone.

Anna, the maid, said that a very close friend of hers would be glad of an opportunity to have a month in the country. Mrs. Sidney took Anna's recommendation with some relief.

The day Anna went away a very pretty girl was met at the train by the chauffeur. She was the thirty-day maid. I saw her as she came in. I thought her manner did not indicate domestic service, but afterward I found that in spite of appearance she was very deft and competent. With Jed gone, such of his duties as could be done by the maids were given them; and this new servant, Agnes, was so efficient in the dining room that she took over what Jed had done there.

Mr. Sidney liked attractive women about him, and Agnes pleased him with her bright, pretty appearance and good-humored serviceability. In three or four days he was glad to have her assigned to duties which Jed had done for him. In little over a week Agnes had fitted into the routine of the house perfectly.

Up to this time nothing had been heard of Jed, but on the ninth day of his disappearance the detective telephoned that they had the lawyer. McGuire was the detective-superintendent's name.

"I am not to understand what is back of this case," he suggested, telephoning.

"It is not necessary," I said. "If he is willing to come here in your custody, that is enough."

The next day McGuire, the detective, came with the lawyer, who apparently was trying to keep from looking as frightened as he felt.

"I'll have you understand I came of my own volition," he said.

"With Mr. McGuire representing your volition," I suggested.

"I think I'll look about the grounds for a while," said McGuire.

"What do you expect to gain by this?" the lawyer asked when the detective had gone.

"What did you fear to lose by not coming?" I asked. "Suppose we make our dealing plain. You were one of a party of three that abducted the servant Jed. We want him released and returned here where he is needed."

"You are talking nonsense," said the lawyer. "I came with your detective because I thought that at last this household was prepared to deal reasonably with a reasonable man."

"Where is Jed?" I asked.

"That's none of my business."

"It will be made yours."

"Barking dogs—moonshine—things to scare babies," said the little man.

McGuire came back.

"I guess I've seen all I want of the grounds," he said, "and there's a train back in half an hour. We've our rig waiting."

"I'm not going back," said the lawyer. "I stay at Hartley."

"What is he to do?" asked McGuire.

"Merely leave the house," I said, and I rang for a maid.

"I'll not be bulldozed," said the lawyer.

"You are not being," I suggested.

"The maid will show you out."

He was at a loss but had nothing else to do but go when the maid came. I held McGuire for only a moment and asked him to have operatives watch the lawyer constantly, with an idea that he actually would remain in Hartley, and to continue to search for Jed.

Mrs. Sidney, Isobel and I had a cheerful dinner that evening. Worried as Mrs. Sidney was by Jed's disappearance, she was relieved by his absence. I had a pleasant two hours with Mr. Sidney, and after that the night produced an occurrence.

Ever since Jed had disappeared I had been accustomed to taking certain responsibilities with regard to the house. The element of security entered as a question. I knew we were in circumstances which demanded—at least asked—precautions. So I went about the house at night to see to locks, in a supervision of the duties the servants performed in closing the place—one I took on myself without saying anything about it.

Hartley house was large, with many wings. It was nearly a half-hour's work to visit all the entrances and see to bolts. Many of the halls and corridors were dark, and I carried an electric flash to use when needed.

I did not say anything of my assumed duties, but I suggested to Mrs. Sidney that, considering the state of the house, it would be wise to tell the household that all doors would be locked at ten o'clock. Mrs. Sidney thought this good policy and the servants were so informed.

"I'll Not Be Bulldozed," Said the Lawyer.

The night which had our phenomenon as a development I started through the house at midnight. I had gone from Mr. Sidney's room to my own, had put on a smoking jacket and slippers, put my revolver in my pocket and had laid my watch on the dresser.

I went downstairs and examined the bolt, lock, and chains on the doors at the main entrance. In the halls leading from these doors there were electric buttons, and the house being presumably closed for the night and darkened, I went from hall to hall, from door to door, lighting my way by pushing the buttons and turning off the lights when I had satisfied myself. In two wings, one to the north and one to the south, there was no electric wiring. In the halls of these wings I went along easily enough with an occasional flash of the little light I carried.

Jed's room was in the south wing on the second floor. The windows of the hall toward the east showed the waning moon just rising above a grove of oak mixed with larch, and I stopped at one of the windows to admire the quiet scene. I was attracted—not startled but turned—by a noise at the farther end of the hall. At that end of the hall were the stairs to the second floor, where Jed had his room. There were no windows at that end, and it was in complete darkness, although three faint rays of moonlight reversed the hall from the windows nearer me.

I listened, and it seemed that the sound I heard was the creaking of old stairs under a light and stealthy step. That interested me, and I went as quietly as I could toward the sound. I must have made some noise. The creaking stopped. I stood still—in one of the shafts of moonlight. There was an instant of silence. I took another step toward the stair and hit my foot against a chair, almost losing my balance.

There was a scurry of feet and a rustling of skirts from the bottom of the stairs across the dark hall. I flashed my electric light, and within its rays saw a glint of white which instantly disappeared down a side corridor which led to a small door used by servants. I started in pursuit, but a blow on the head, sharp but not powerful, coming from behind, knocked me down.

It dazed me a bit and felled me, but was not enough to make me unconscious. Nevertheless I got to my feet unsteadily and made my way slowly down the corridor into which the flash of white had turned. I came to the door with my electric light illuminating the hall, and thus I knew no one was in it—it had no recesses or furniture to offer concealment—and found the door locked from the outside.

"Agnes, the new maid, can not be found."

FAINTING AND DIZZY SPELLS

The Cause of such Symptoms and Remedy Told in This Letter.

Syracuse, N. Y.—"When I commenced the Change of Life I was poorly, had no appetite and had fainting spells. I suffered for two or three years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills which I saw advertised in the papers and in your little books. I took about twelve bottles of your Vegetable Compound and found it a wonderful remedy. I commenced to pick up at once and my suffering was relieved. I have told others about your medicine and know of some who have taken it. I am glad to help others all I can."

Mrs. R. E. DEMING, 437 W. Lafayette Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moreover this reliable remedy contains no narcotics or harmful drugs and owes its efficiency to the medicinal extracts of the native roots and herbs which it contains.

Insist on DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS Three Ds in Name

"DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS are a wonderful medicine for kidney trouble. I used them about 15 years ago and they completely relieved me. My daughter used them recently and they greatly benefited her. I can certainly praise them."

The Best Advice FOR MOTHERS

ELGIN, ILL.—"I was weak, nervous and run-down after motherhood, and was advised to take the 'Favorite Prescription.' I took about five bottles while nursing my baby and he seemed to improve as much as I did. My appetite was normal once more and I was able to sleep at night, and became strong and well. I would never hesitate in recommending Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all young mothers who need just such a tonic for they will be benefited as I have been."

Mrs. CARRIE HILL, 814 Dundee Ave.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy that any ailing woman can safely take, because it is prepared from roots, does not contain alcohol or narcotics. All druggists.

The Woods

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH.

THE CALL OF THE WOODS.

Talk of your "call of the wild," "Nature" an' similar stuff! Talk of "the call Of the forest" an' all— Haven't I heard it enough? Why am I cranky an' riled? What is it allin' of me? What's my complaint? Jest "the woods!" If it ain't, What in the world kin it be?

Out of the woods it breaks forth— Call of the wild in the air. What do I hear With my listenin' ear? Somethin' a-coaxin' me there. Wind has swung 'round to the north. Sky has a promise of snow, Moon on the hill. It is silver an' chill: An' I am longin' to go— Breathin' the breath of the pine, Walkin' the hayroad again, Hearin' old tales, An' trampin' old trails, Bunkin' with men that are men— Men that are partners of mine, Fighters an' workers an' kings, Men who have stood By my side in the wood At the beginnin' of things.

Woods? I have lived, man an' boy, Up in the woods forty year, Driven their streams Where the quickwater gleams, Fought 'em from store-boom to rear, Tasted their pain an' their joy, Drunk of their fun an' their woe, Sorrow an' song, An' it's there I belong— Lord, but I'm crazy to go! (Copyright.)

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS

—WHAT THEY MEAN

DREAM CITIES.

IT IS not an uncommon experience to find ourselves in a dream city. Perhaps it is one which we recognize though it may be changed by the dream phantasmagoria; familiar buildings may take on a strange aspect, or strange city buildings appear in unexpected places. Sometimes we recognize it as a city we have always wanted to see and never have seen; and sometimes it appears to be one of which we never have even heard. Not infrequently a name for the place is suggested in our dream—a name which we are sure is new to us. It is a cheap way to travel and the mystics say, not a bad one. For, while to visit cities in the waking life is an expensive operation, to travel to the cities of dreams is accounted a most favorable omen and means riches ahead. Unless indeed the city be on fire; then take care of your finances or poverty will overtake you.

It is generally agreed that if your city of dreams is a strange one to you, and you are lost in it, you will shortly change your residence with, as a rule, favorable results to your business.

All scientists do not agree with Freud that every dream is the fulfillment of a wish, but it is easy enough to fit this dream into its category. An analysis of our dream will generally enable us to discover the origin of the strange name propounded by our dream—consciousness for the strange city in which we may find ourselves. Thus Freud dreams of being at a strange place called Fleisa and one further on named Hearsing. Fleiss was the name of a friend. Hearsing was put together from the names of places near Vienna which so often end in "ing" and the English word "hearsay." He had been reading a poem about a slanderous dwarf named "Saidhe Hashesaid." By connecting the final syllable of Hearsing with Flissa was obtained Viissingen—the German V pronounced life F—the German name for the port of Flushing through which his brother passed in coming from England to visit him. OTHELLO

OTHELLO was a violent specimen of brutish manhood who was written up by W. Shakespeare after he had departed this life, and it was safe to do so. Nobody wrote up Othello while he was in the flesh without being assailed by remorse and a corps of trained nurses.

Othello was a large man with a muscled exterior and feet which had to be fitted out of stock. He was a great warrior and was sent into Turkey every once in a while to increase the death rate. Turkey at that time was animated by the same humane and law-abiding instincts as those which now endear her to the civilized world. It was on his return from a depopulating mission to Turkey that Othello met Desdemona and married her at one of the largest church weddings of the season. For a time it seemed as if the wedding would have to be postponed, as Desdemona wanted one of her close personal friends with a thick, wavy vibrato to sing "A Perfect Day" as the bridal couple entered, but Othello objected in his boorish Moorish manner.

Mr. Shakespeare states that Othello and Desdemona would have lived to a ripe old age if it had not been for one Iago, who was a coarse person with the rank of first sergeant. Othello had a large, green bump of jealousy, and Iago played upon the same until it resembled an arc light. In fact, Desdemona was a perfect lady and thought as much of her husband as she did of her clothes, but she innocently gave a pocket handkerchief with strawberry juice upon it to a friend of the family named Cassio, and in return for this generous act she was assassinated by Othello with that deadly weapon, the straw tick. When Othello discovered his mistake, he climbed onto high C and cried out for revenge after which he fell on his sword and expired with an annoyed look.

The life of Othello should warn wives not to provoke their husbands to jealousy, especially in view of the large number of coy affinities who lurk on every corner. (Copyright.)

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK by Nellie Maxwell

Some one has said that "true hospitality consists in having what you were going to have anyway, and not changing the cloth unless you were going to anyway."

Good Things for the Family. Soften one cake of compressed yeast in one-fourth of a cup of lukewarm water, add one cupful of scalded and cooled milk and one and one-half cupfuls of flour; beat until smooth. Cover and set out of draughts to become light. Add one-fourth of a cupful each of melted shortening and sugar, two egg yolks beaten light, one teaspoonful of salt, the grated rind of a lemon and flour for a dough—about three cupfuls. Knead until smooth and elastic. Cover and set aside to become double in bulk. Turn upside down on the molding board, roll into a rectangular sheet, brush with melted butter, dredge with sugar and cinnamon mixed, sprinkle with half a cupful of currants, and roll as a jelly roll. Cut into pieces an inch long. Cream one-fourth of a cup of shortening, beat in one-fourth of a cup of brown sugar and spread mixture on the inside of a cast iron frying pan; lay in the buns and when doubled in bulk, bake one-half hour. The sugar and butter should glaze the bottom of the buns. Serve turned upside down, glazed side up.

Hard Sauce.

Beat one-third of a cup of softened butter to a cream, add one cupful of light brown sugar gradually; when well mixed add two tablespoonfuls of cream, drop by drop, and lastly one teaspoonful of vanilla and a few drops of lemon extract or a grating of lemon rind. Ginger and lemon rind may be used in place of the vanilla and a few tablespoonfuls of creamed dates added to give bulk.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"Fox-Trot."

VARIOUS efforts have been made to trace this name for the popular dancestep to the pace or trot of a horse, some investigators going so far as to locate a certain Mr. Fox who owned a horse which trotted in a peculiar fashion and, because of which, he referred to one of the newest of dances (at that time) as a "fox-trot."

But, while there was a man named Fox connected with the origin of the term as commonly used today, he was a vaudeville dancer, not a horse fancier. When this dancer desired to introduce a number of new steps into his vaudeville act, early in 1914, he took certain portions of the one-step and added to them a number of variations of his own, billing the entire performance as "The Fox-Trot, a new dance originated solely by the performers themselves." Society, eager to take up something new in the line of dancing, studied the steps and it was not long before the entire country was fox-trotting to the syncopated melodies which precisely fitted this kind of amusement. The only reward that Fox received was that his name, without the capital letter, was spread broadcast over two continents. (Copyright.)

Inconsiderate Birds.

She was a trifle disappointed at finding the country so noisy, but for a long time, being a well-conducted little girl, she made no remark about it.

But at last, at breakfast time, she plucked up courage to pass a remark upon the subject to the farmer's wife. "It's very nice," she said, thoughtfully, "for the birds to get up so early in the morning, but don't you think they ought to be quieter about it?"

"Index Numbers."

The "index number" is a well-established device commonly used for measuring changes in wholesale and retail prices and rates of wages over long periods of time. It is constructed by securing each month the prices or rates of a uniform list, at certain specified places, and striking an average. Such numbers are usually reduced to percentages. The lowest price known is sometimes taken as a base, or as in case of investment stocks, 100 is used.
